Descrizione                  Description:	My research has primarily centered on conceptual and methodological issues in the philosophy of medicine and psychiatry, emphasizing the role of non-cognitive values in scientific practices and advocating for the recognition of medicine as an empirical science. A key aspect of my research explores the relationship between evidence, values, and cognitive biases, notably within the medical field (SistIntell2022, Politeia2021, Protosoc2016), delving into how values influenced aspects like the Vaxzevria vaccine case (EvalClinPract2023), the development of Covid-19 epidemiological models (PhilMed2022, Mefisto2021), the definition of cause of death (HPLS2021a, QuestGiust2020), and the conceptual frameworks related to Covid-19 and aging (HPLS2021b). I've also defended the idea that cognitive biases may have epistemic advantages in specific medical contexts (RSL2017) and examined the impact of gender values and stereotypes on medicine (Springer2024,2015, Topoi2017, Verifiche2013). My thesis is that values and cognitive biases do not necessarily affect the objectivity and rationality of medicine and science more generally (GUP2022, CarocciForth, MimesiForth, R&amp;SForth). Turning to the philosophical analysis of disease and mental disorder concepts, I've challenged prototypical definitions (M&amp;S2016) and strong normativism (TMB2020, Carocci2019), especially questioning the necessity of the harm requirement (TMB2019, RIFP2018). I defended what I dubbed "value-conscious naturalism": while disease is identified with dysfunction, the operationalization of this notion acknowledges the role of values (MHCP2022). This perspective aligns medicine with other empirical sciences, where values play a crucial role in operationalizing scientific concepts. I defended the idea that medicine should be considered on a par with empirical sciences (Carocci2023, ECIG2019), recently focusing on the realism/antirealism debate (OUPforth, Carocci2023) Furthermore, I've addressed ontological and epistemological reductionism in psychiatry (SistInt2018, ETS2021), the epistemic status of DSM nosology (JournMedPhil2019) and specific mental disorders, including the Social (Pragmatic) Communication Disorder (HPLS2021c), feeding and eating disorders (Topoi2021), and gender dysphoria (Politeia2020). I also engaged with feminist philosophies of science (Disputatio2018, Springer2016,2013) and delved into the philosophy of mind and cognitive sciences (Argumenta2016,2017), particularly exploring content externalism and the social nature of the mind (EsFil2016, Protosoc2013; Aphex2013; CambridgeSch2015). A significant
--	---

	focus has been on the consequences of externalism for biological psychiatry (PhilPsych2023). Finally, in the representation of knowledge, I've proposed a hybrid approach combining traditional description logics with conceptual spaces. This has been applied to conceptualize mental disorders (Springer2019) and food-related concepts (ApplOnt2020, HumMente2020).

SIGNIFICANT AWARDS AWARDED FOR YOUR RESEARCH ACTIVITY):

Descrizione Description:	Over the past decade, my academic journey has been characterized by active participation in diverse and impactful research initiatives. Notably, I held the position of Principal Investigator for the project "Representing Concepts Using Prototypes? The Case of Medical Concepts" from 2018 to 2021, securing funding from the University of Genoa through a competitive peer-reviewed process. This project delved into innovative dimensions of conceptualization and knowledge representation within the medical field, proposing a hybrid approach combining description logics and conceptual spaces. Another significant role was as the Principal Investigator for the project "The Role of Communication in Shaping Scientific Knowledge," conducted at the University of Genoa and King's College, London, spanning from 2010 to 2013. Funded by the European Social Fund through the strategic project POSDRU/89/1.5/S/63663 "Trans-national network of integrated management for post-doctoral research in the field of Science Communication. Institutional construction (post-doctoral school) and fellowship programme (CommScie)", this research explored the social nature of the mind and the intersubjective dimension of scientific knowledge. Emphasizing Davidsonian triangulation, the project investigated the influence of values in scientific research, the pluralistic nature of science, and the dynamics of knowledge formation. I have also contributed to academia by supervising two postdoctoral fellowships at the University of Genoa: "The Influence of Nonverbal Language on Human Cognition in a Context of Human-Robot Communication" (2021-22) and "Philosophical Issues in Behavior Genetics" (2019-20). Additionally, my involvement in numerous national and international projects, supported by funding from the University of Genoa and MIUR (PRIN and Italy/South Korea bilateral protocol), underscores my commitment to collaborative research. Throughout this journey, I have been privileged to receive scholarships and fellowships from esteemed institutions, including the University of Genoa, MIUR, and the European Social Fund. These financial supports have facilitated my research pursuits, taking me to institutions such as the Technischen Universität München, Ruhr Universitaet Bochum, and King's College London. My contributions to the field have been recognized with prestigious awards, including the Prof. Paolo Michele Erede Prize. In 2018, my paper, "Medicine, Between Humanities, Arts, and Sciences," secured the top position, earning me a noteworthy award of €1,500. Similarly, in 2012, my paper on "Human Beings, Biological Machines, and Artificial Machines" garnered the first position, further adding to my accolades with another €1,500 prize.

I also served as one of the chairs for Section 34, Medical Humanities and Philosophy of Medicine, at the XXV World Congress of Philosophy, "Philosophy across Boundaries," held in Rome in 2024. Furthermore, over the past ten years I have been actively involved in organizing approximately 20 national and international conferences and 15 seminars, often taking on the role of coordinator for the committee. The most recent ones include the XIX International Conference of the Italian Association of Cognitive Sciences (AISC), at the University of Genoa, and the IPMR10, 10th International Philosophy of Medicine Roundtable, at the University of Bologna. Between 2015 and 2025, I have presented more than 60 talks at national and international conferences, including both refereed submissions and invitations. In September 2025 I will be a keynote speaker for the Italian Society of Philosophy of Language. Additionally, I have delivered more than 50 invited lectures at Italian and foreign universities.
